The Spanish-Peruvian War Question.

LINA, Jan. 18 1868. and Rumors of Wars.—Negotiations Going On will Spanish Admiral—The Chances for a Speedy Settle i—The American Congress—Commercial Matters, de wan in the mouses.

Strim visaged war appears to be the order of the day, tonly in North but in South America, for late advices ution the commencement of hostilities between Brazil i Paraguay, besides then ever-ending civil war in the vince of Monterideo, a new attempt of the same unre in Bolivia, which is certainly unwarranted, rash it in more senses than one very unpatriotie; and last, sugh on account of its possible complications perhaps, least, the Spanish-Peruvian difficulties, on which as ial, the principal interest of the last fortnight has streed in this locality, but without any extraordicontrol in this locality, but without any extraordi-nary dinunition of the customary festivities of Christ-mas and the New Year. The second mission despatched to the Spanish Admiral at the Chincha Islands by the previous to the notorious aggression. Two days after, the steamer returned, bringing what may or may not have been the consequence, but certain it is, that on the 13d, the national steam transport Chalaco left at noon for the Islands under a flag of truce and carrying General Tvanco with two attaches, with instructions, as explained y the Minister to the Peruvian Congress, to communicate ith the Admiral, and demand the abandonment of the sland and the required salute to the flag, when, if com-lied with, the General might enter into negotiations for thich he had full powers. The Chalaco returned on the wening of the 2d inst., without the Minister, who, it ppears, had been cordially received by the Admiral; but supreme authorities of Peru apparently reside in he clouds, or appear to think that the nation has noth and clouds, or appear to think that the nation has noth-ing to do with the question, nothing is positively known of the result, though the game has been going on by de-spatches overland, and by the steamer, which left again on the 5th for the same destination and returned yestorday, still with the same mystery—a continuation of the reserve which has produced the actual government as much diffiealty and animadversion as the errors in judgment and ensound measures displayed in almost every branch of the administration. Rumors, in consequence, bear the varied colors of the rainbow; but, although peace may altimately come of the negotiations, the arrangement does not appear so casy as was looked forward to, nor can the result be confidently calculated upon.

SPANER VIEW OF THE QUESTION.

The Madrid Correspondencia, organ of the new Cabinet, considers the question as one full of difficulties, and says that some of the ministers wish for energetic action, while others desire the disapprobation of all former measures and the retirement of the squadron from the Pacific. This indecision may possibly have originated the proposale appearing in the papers of both countries as the probable basis of an understanding, viz:—

Mutual and simultaneous salute of the two flags, for which purpose one of the Spanish frigates would appear in Caliac.

Discocupation of the islands in dispute.

mittal and simultaneous salute of the two flags, for which purpose one of the Spanish Irigates would appear in Callao.

Disoccupation of the islands in disputs.

Formal denial of participation in the alleged injuries to the Spanish Commissioner, and an avowal of ignorance as to the quality of the Scoretary during the alleged attempt of imprisonment of said Scoretary.

Appointment of a minister to the peninsula to explain the occurrences at Talambo with reference to the alleged abuse towards Spaniards, which may be said, on passant, eaght not to be mentioned.

The pecuniary claims to be referred to a mixed commission; and Oblivion of all questions with other republics arising set of the conflict between Spain and Peru.

A DISHTERBERTO VIEW.

Taking it for granted that peace would be preferable for Peru, in spite of the unwarranted injuries done her, and supposing that Spain would find it most politic to clear up the imbregile, it appears but natural that the latter should endeavor to obtain some semblance of an amicable agreement in order to cover her dignity; but in reality most of these requirements have already been efficiently wiped away, and the pecuniary claims have never been denied; nor is there any reason to think that they ever would have been had they been demanded in accordance with international custom. So that the territory remain as naked truths, for which Epain, in attrict justice, should offer compensation, instead of seeking satisfaction for injuries which existed originally only in the desire for creating a quarrel to suit the aspirations of certain political blacklegs who deserve to be held up to the execration of all patriotic men.

THE PERCYLAN MINISTRY AND THE PRESS.

Out of thirty-two Jurymen elected for the year to deside upon the misdemeanors of the press, fourteen have refused to act, in spite of pecuniary punishment, on account of the forcible closing of one of the printing establishments by the government and the imprisonment of some of the writers, and on the 3d inst. the Chamber of Deputies voted against the Ministry, by thirty-seven to thirty-six, for mal-appropriation and violence to the press, in defance of the constitution, and named a Committee of Accusation to the Fenate; and yet the Ministry look on with apparent indifference, relying, probably, on the support of some friends who still cling to the government in spite of the numerous motives for indignation and censure, proved as such, not by mere opinion, always liable to err, but by the result—the most positive and tenacious of all proofs. Such is the effect of individual interest and consequent political bias.

THE FURLIC PIRANCES, ETC.

The deficit of the revenue for the next two years, as esculated by the Minister of Finance, will be forty-seven millions of dollars, and yet he presents this document to Congress very naively, without any attempt at a remedy, each as is expected in all representative governments. Else position is, therefore, much preferable to the individual who is supposed to found his exponses on the beast of his income. Here the Minister has nothing to do but to get rid of the dollars, without troubling his head where they are to come from, and very advantageous where they are to come from, and very advantageous where they are to come from, and very advantageous where they are to come from, means, and of the thousands who live on the public purse all with to save their own incomes, and practice seconomy with those of their neighbors. What will come of it, therefore, a a problem.

The mint of Lima, under the monetary conversion contract, conceded to individuals some months since, coined in the month of November, 271,782 hard dollars, from 14,750 pounds of silver; but, unfortunately, as the balance of trade is against this country, all this coinage is exported by merchants in the usual operations of commerce, and it is said that as much as five millions of dollars in gold and silver coin have been sent principally to Europe during the last two years. This may be considered somewhat serious when it is known that no part of what is exported ever returns, and that the old coinage is being collected at the same time for conversion into the new, so that the monetary circulation of Peru is gradually becoming reduced to paper issued by private banks recently established, which would be doubtless, well enough were it only a matter of convenience, and well guaranteed by the metallic representation; but no one is sware of this fact, as none of the banks have taken the trouble to satisfy the public; though, if the truth be said, there is so far no reason to believe the contrary. But when we learn and constantly hear of the great disasters occurring amidst mercantile communities possessing resources so wondrous in their kind, it is not strange that here, with resources proportionately much inferior, a certain want of condence in the paper currency should be gradually creeping over the public mind, especially as no banking laws exist in Peru, and no one is responsible for a broach of faith above the common defective laws of commerce. But the interests of the banks themselves will, it is hoped, save the public from any extastrophe; but should anything extraordinary occur, the country, on a sudden, will find itself without any colonage of any description—a fact, the possibility of which nover appears loaded at the to easist the Peruviess in their battles against Spa E returned home on the 5th inst, and it is mid not at all pleased with the treatment they deportenced in Peru. If it to be hoped that such is not the fact; but, if so, the Peruvian government and efficials can differ no valid excess for conduct so unparionable in every sense.

The periodical tides in Callao Bay have done considerable damage this year, carrying away the protections of the beach fer some length and destroying sundry lumber yards; but perhaps the most "grad cut of all" was the destruction of the floating before, worth something as property, but much more so the four lives that were lost. The mail steamer Peru, which left here on the 5th inst, struck on the rocks near the Fort of Islay, but fortunately only injured one of the watertight compariments, and, the rest proving sound, she proceeded as her way with cargo and correspondence, the passengers having preferred to land at Islay. A desse fog was the cause.

The Chile Congress closed its assiston, after voting a subvention of $100,000 per annum, but not to exceed the years, for assistance to a steamship company through the Straits of Magellan.

The smigration question was also creating much attention, and some energetic measures are likely soon to be adopted. At Valparaiso recent advices had been received from Australia. Flour in Sydney, November 18, from Adelaide, 225 per ton; from California, 220, and from Chile, $18 per ton.

The foreign ships of war in the Bay of Caliao at the present date are the British steam frigate Leander and steam corvette Shearwater, the United States steam frigate Lancaster and the French sailing corvette Cordeliere. Foreign exchange without alteration. Commorcial affairs as usual, waiting and wishing for the advent of peace. In the meantime very little activity is discoverable.

The Spanish-Peruvian bubble has exploded. All the most patriotic declamations of our penny-a-liners, all the bully vociforations of our political charistana, all representations, all thrests, all intimation, all intrigues, all meetings of clubs and ministers, even those of the American Congress included—all, all, have ended in smoke.

rican Congress Included—all, all, have ended in smoke.

Peru does not fight, because it has noither men nor means to fight with. Chile is of the same opinion, and alleged that our navy belongs to the Grab family. Bolivia prefers to have her boundary line defined before fighting Spain, as the peninsular pirates could not sail across the Cordilleras. The Argentine republic prefers to have her little difficulty with Chile, regarding the territorial jurisdiction of Patagonia, out of the way. Ecuador, at all events, must follow the regular course of the law of nations. Treatles of friendship and commerce exist between Spain and that republic; and Peru has at different times followed the most aggressive policy towards the government of Moreno. Similar arguments were addressed by New Granada, Venozuela, Costa Rica; and, so far as the Spanish-Peruvian question was concerned, the soi disants.

American Congress also ended in smoke.

Therefore, on the 29th ult., this government sent Gen. Vivanco to the Chinchas to propose conditions of peace to the Spanish Admiral commanding the invad ng squadron. The Feruvian messenger of peace has not returned yet, but his Secretary arrived last night. He reports that all is satifactorily arranged, except, the gliding of the plii, notwithstanding it had already been swallowed by General Vivanco, on the 16th instant, at a dinner party on board of the flauship Resoluction, to which our peace messenger contributed six hundred pounds of Boston ice. The first toast proposed by General Vivanco was "Viva La España!" To which Admiral Pareja responded, "Mi Fatrica U Peru!" and the "Gallica!" (the Spanish Admiral is a native of Lima). Crusted "hulle de Verd-ix" settled the hash. Peru pays: Peru apologizes; Peru "en feu" satisfies the demands of Mr. Pacheco, her Catholic Majestiva Foreign Secretary, on the 24th of June last. The portioilos to hold the new Spanish treaty are already ordered; but unfortunately there is no yellow silk velvet in Lima. Spain shares her national colors with the portion
